H.U.C. President Scores New U.S. Alien Bill

Dr. Nelson Glueck, president of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, asserted in Buffalo, N. Y., that the McCarran-Walter immigration bill was the "apotheosis of everything ignoble that America was created to oppose." The Jewish educator said the bill represented "an ideological gift to Communist subversion and aggression that must fill the masters of the Kremlin with unholy glee."

Addressing 400 leaders of Reform Judaism who attended the sixty-third annual meeting of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, Dr. Glueck scored the "insular exclusivism, ferocious racism and shattering religious pessimism and negativism" that he said characterized the bill.

Dr. Glueck, who heads the oldest Rabbinical seminary in America, expressed hope that President Truman would veto the bill. He held that it "represents a grievous and spreading cancer in our body politic which must be arrested and removed, if America is to remain healthy and free and flourish in its position of leadership in the family of nations."

Deploring the reaction that he said was manifesting itself in religion, politics, morals and manners, Dr. Glueck added: "In meeting places of learning and law, in centers of production and exchange, the brave adventure of mankind towards horizons of freedom from hunger and hatred is being halted by Communist aggression on the one hand and blind apathy or bigotry on the other."

In voicing his adherence to the [illegible] separation of church [illegible] a part of the Judaeo-based cultural pattern and spiritual patrimony of America, will never adbicate our religious independence in favor or in fear of authoritarian power, whether at home or abroad. We are

Was Famous As Authority On Textiles

Sylvan L. Stroock, chairman of the board of directors of the Stroock Textile Enterprises, 404 Fifth Avenue, New York, and for the last forty years associated with the American woolen industry, died at his home in the Drake Hotel after a long illness. He was 85 years old. An authority on every phase of textiles, Mr. Stroock designed and produced fabrics that became well known. He also wrote a number of brochures and books on the subject, which achieved prominence in the textile and educational fields.

Mr. Stroock had served on the advisory board of the City College of New York and had conducted lecture courses at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration and the Wharton School of Business and Finance of the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stroock was born in New York, the son of Louis S. and Pauline Schrier Stroock and the grandson of Samuel Stroock, founder of the firm. The Stroock family resided first in Tennessee and came to New York in 1856. It was then that the firm of S. Stroock & Co. was founded. In 1899 the firm established the Stroock Felt Mills at New Windsor, N. Y., the largest individual felt manufacturing plant in the world.

After his graduation from high school in New York, Mr. Stroock journeyed West, where he worked as a cowpuncher on various ranches and trained for the British Government horses that were used in the Boer War. He became associated with the family business in 1904, serving his apprenticeship in the felt mills, and later joined the Stroock Plush Company. In 1922, [illegible] Stroock died in 1936, his brother, Joseph, became head of the company, retiring in 1939. He was succeeded by Bertram, brother of Sylvan. In 1932, Mr. Stroock succeeded his brother as president, and held the post until 1949, when he was

Survey Shows N.Y. Medical Schools Unfair

Most of New York State's nine medical schools are violating the state's fair educational practices law by continuing their discriminatory practices in connection with the admittance of qualified Jewish students, the American Jewish Congress and the Committee for Equality in Education charged in a letter to John P. Myers, chancellor of the state's Board of Regents. The letter, signed by Herman L. Weisman, chairman of the AJCongress' Commission on Law and Social Action, also transmitted to Mr. Myers the findings of a recently completed survey by the two organizations to back up this charge. The survey analyzes the admittance experiences of 57 of the 72 pre-medical students who were awarded in 1951 full-tuition paid state medical scholarships, good in any school in that state, on the basis of written competitive examinations.

This survey revealed that the 41 Jewish students who won state scholarships, had to file a total of 214 applications with the nine state schools in order to gain admittance, or twice as many per capita as the 16 non-Jewish winners who filed 39 applications, a ratio of 5.4 to 2.4. Thus, the samplings revealed applications of non-Jewish scholarship winners achieved a record of 78.1 per cent of acceptances by New York medical schools, while those of Jewish scholarship winners achieved only 35.9 per cent, although both groups ranked equally in scholarship and medical aptitudes.

A further analysis revealed that Cornell University's medical school and the Flower Hospital's New York Medical College were [illegible] applied; the latter only one out of 13. Cornell medical school also rejected the application of every Jewish scholarship winner living in New York City, 21 in all. This practice of rejecting New York City pre-medical students, the report noted, was fairly common with most of the schools covered by the survey. Cornell rejected eight of its own scholarship winning Jewish alumni, notwithstanding the fact that Cornell's pre-medical students have the best medical aptitude records in the state. Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons accepted three of the 19 Jewish scholarship winners surveyed.

The best record of compliance with the state's educational law was achieved by Long Island University's Medical School. Of 29 Jewish scholarship winners who applied, 28 were interviewed and 26 were accepted. New York University medical school accepted 13 out of 25 scholarship

Resume Hague Talks On Jewish Claims

The National Community Relations Advisory Council, composed of major Jewish national organizations, announced that it had postponed its meeting in Atlantic City from June 28-30 to permit several Jewish communal leaders to leave for Europe to attend the conference on Jewish claims against Germany. They are: Jacob Blaustein, president of the American Jewish Committee; Adolph Held of the Jewish Labor Committee; and Frank Goldman, president of Bnai Brith; and Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the Jewish Agency for Palestine.

The offer by the German Cabinet for a settlement of Jewish and Israeli claims against Germany provides the basis for the resumption of negotiations with Germany which suspended on April 8, 1952, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, Chairman of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany and of the Jewish Agency for Palestine announced at a press conference in New York. Dr. Nahum Goldmann expressed the hope that the negotiations, when resumed, "will be concluded within a relatively short period and in a satisfactory manner."

The negotiations, which first began in The Hague, Holland, on March 21, reached a deadlock when the German delegation announced that it could make no concrete offer before the conclusion of West Germany's negotiations with her commercial creditors at the London Debt Conference. Dr. Nahum Goldmann said that the major obstacles for the resumption of negotiations seem to have been cleared away after a series of [illegible] talks held in the past [illegible] with Chancellor Konrad [illegible] and other members of [illegible] Franz Boehm, Chairman of the German negotiating team at The Hague.

He said the following "satisfactory results" were the outcome of these informal talks: 1. There is now complete separation between the London German debt conference and the Jewish claims conference. The German Government has now acceded to the view that the claims of Israel and of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany are of a unique, moral character, and must be dealt with differently than the claims of commercial creditors.

2. The amount which Germany offered Israel as the basis for a resumption of negotiations "is the full amount which the German negoti-

Noted Labor Lawyer Was Active In ORT

Louis H. Boudin, noted labor lawyer and authority on constitutional law, died in New York at his home, 200 West Fifty-eighth Street, after a long illness. His age was 78. He was the senior partner of the law firm of Boudin, Cohn & Glickstein at 1776 Broadway, and had served for many years as chairman of the board of directors of American ORT Federation and as a director of World ORT.

In his legal work, Mr. Boudin represented many A. F. L. and C. I. O. unions in important cases before the courts. He refused, however, to take part in factional fights between the two labor groups, although he fought relentlessly against racketeering and corruption in the trade union movement.

Born in Russia in 1874, Mr. Boudin came to the United States in 1891. He received his master's degree from New York University Law School in 1897 and was admitted to the New York bar the next year. He was admitted to practice before the United States bar in 1919.

In 1907, Mr. Boudin's book, "The Theoretical System of Karl Marx," was published in New York, and later the volume was translated into many languages. The book was used in the economics departments of several universities as a standard text on the philosophy of Marxism, says the New York Times.

After leaving the Socialist party, Mr. Boudin quit political activities to devote his time to his law prac-

Scientist Sees Need Of Plant In Israel

Prof. Selman A. Waksman, who is delivering a series of lectures as a guest of the Weizmann Institute, at Rehovoth, Israel, said he was exploring the possibilities of establishing an antibiotics plant in Israel. Dr. Waksman, who is Professor of Microbiology at Rutgers University, is known for his work in developing streptomycin.

"Israel needs an antibiotics plant," he said, "and there are three main alternatives in getting her one." The first and best way, he said, would be to interest a large United States or other foreign firm in backing and providing an Israeli group with experience in setting up such a plant and operating it. Organizations approached have felt they already have sufficient foreign affiliates, but there is still hope, Professor Waksman said.

A second way would be for Israeli scientists to apply available information and start producing with local capital. The plant could be staffed with young Israelis trained at World Health Organization centers such as the one established last year at the Instituto Superiore Di Sanita in Rome. Two Israelis already are studying there. Dr. Waksman believed a plant of this kind could start with penicillin and later develop other antibiotics.

Z.O.A. Head Urges Support For Israel, Leadership In U.S. Jewry

Rabbi Irving Miller, newly elected president of the Zionist Organization of America, outlined in New York the organization's program for next year in relation to Israel and American Jewry. Speaking at the first meeting of the organization's new national executive committee at the Statler which concluded the Z. O. A.'s fifty-fifth annual convention, Rabbi Miller made two major points:

The Z. O. A. will seek to "help create a climate of public opinion favorable to Israel's legitimate political and economic needs in order that the forces which sought to prevent the creation of Israel are not now to succeed in destroying what has been achieved." And the Z. O. A. will urge its members to assume leadership on national and local levels in all aspects of Jewish communal life to insure "a creative and meaningful future for Judaism in America."

Rabbi Miller emphasized that Israel, like the United States, must afford full encouragement to private initiative "to make its own unique and significant contribution to the upbuilding of the country and the absorption of newcomers." The Z. O. A. and its counterpart in Israel, the General Zionist party, favor private enterprise and disagree with a number of the socialist measures of Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion.

Rabbi Miller, in his statement, and the convention, by unanimous resolution, thanked President Truman and the United States Congress for consistent support to Israel. Another resolution called for adjustment of differences which have arisen between the Israel Bond Drive, and the United Jewish Appeal.

Rudolf G. Sonneborn, national chairman of the United Israel Appeal, in a speech read for him by Ellis Radinsky, the U.I.A.'s executive director, said that in the last year the U.I.A. has spent $[illegible],300,000 is Israel of which $[illegible],600,000 was collected for agricultural development and the establishment of forty new settlements. The U. I. A. receives its funds from the United Jewish Appeal.

During the first five months of this year, Mr. Sonneborn said, the U. I. A. has received $[illegible]. Mr. Sonneborn noted that "the U. I. A. has spent on average of $140,000,000 a year or almost three times as much as we spent during each of the four years preceding the establishment of Israel."

"It is self-evident that the founding of the state and the unlimited immigration has created for the United Jewish Appeal and the United Israel Appeal larger and more urgent responsibilities than ever before," Mr. Sonneborn said.

The delegates urged the World Confederation of General Zionists to continue to press "for healing of the rift created in the ranks of General Zionism by the formation of the Progressive party, and to seek every means for bringing about the unification of the Progressives with the Organization of General Zionists in Israel."

The Progressive and General Zionist parties in Israel have a similar political philosophy, with special emphasis on private initiative. The progressive bloc, which has been described as somewhat left of center, broke away from the General Zionists.

Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the World Confederation of General Zionists, outlined a program of action for American Zionists. He said that Zionist [illegible]

Was Counsel To Notorious Clients

David Goldstein, seventy-two, criminal lawyer, former law partner with his brother, Judge Jonah J. Goldstein of General Sessions, and then with his son, Gilbert Goldstein, at 2 Lafayette Street, New York, died in Prospect Heights Hospital, Brooklyn, after an operation. He lived at 22 Gordon Court, Far Rockaway, Queens.

Mr. Goldstein, a native of Lithuania, was reared in Canada and received his law degree from New York University in 1908. He was associated with the Grand Street Boys Association, of which his brother is president. Surviving besides his son and brother, are his wife, Mrs. Minnie Goldstein; two daughters, Mrs. Ethyl G. Alper and Mrs. Sylvia D. Levy; two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Mashkov and Mrs. Gertrude Peck, and six grandchildren.

Mr. Goldstein's most notorious client was the late Dutch Schultz, whom he counseled in 1931 on income tax problems, but more recently his clients most in the limelight were "Trigger Mike" Coppola and Joey Rao, a pair of Harlem mobsters held as material witnesses in the unsolved murder in 1946 of Joseph R. Scottoriggio, Republican Election District Captain in East Harlem.

Mr. Goldstein served as counsel for several union leaders who became defendants in the restaurant "shake-down" racket trial of 1937.

One of the police officers who retired the day Thomas F. Murphy was sworn in as Police Commissioner to clean up the department, former Inspector John E. Flynn, retained Mr. Goldstein as counsel, but escaped criminal trial when Harry Gross refused to testify against him or his alleged fellow conspirators in a $20,000,000-a-year bookmaking syndicate.

Three hundred and fifty delegates from 70 chapters in 28 states gathered on the campus of Brandeis University, America's first non-sectarian Jewish-sponsored university, in Waltham, Mass., for the fourth Annual Conference of the National Women's Committee of the University. Organized by a small group of Boston women four years ago, four months before the new institution opened its doors, the membership of 35,000 women has through annual life membership dues supported the University Library in its entirety, including books, maintenance, equipment, salaries for personnel. A non-fund organization, supported solely through membership dues and contributions to the "Books for Brandeis" Fund, the Women's Committee has already raised $587,000 and has supplied the library with 70,000 volumes and 49 collections.

Allergy, once an almost unknown word, is today a commonly used name for the sensitive reaction of certain people to ordinary substances which they inhale, touch or eat. Whether the allergy takes the form of hay fever, skin eruption or an asthmatic condition, a doctor should be consulted to identify the cause and prescribe treatment.

Expect From Special German Tax

The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany protested the failure to exempt assets of victims of Nazism from special tax legislation now pending in the Bonn Parliament. Revenue from this tax would be used to assist German nationals whose present hardships are the consequence of Hitler's aggression. The Conference reiterated its position that it would be indefensible if those who have borne the brunt of Nazi persecution were now forced to surrender any part of assets they have recovered since the war, in order to ease the hardships of Germans.

A statement on the subject, issued by the Presidium of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, reads: "The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany views with grave concern the attempts to subject victims of Nazi persecution to taxation under the proposed Equalisation of Burdens legislation in Western Germany. The Conference, speaking on behalf of 23 major Jewish organizations in the world, feels constrained to call attention to the grave injustice of forcing victims of Nazi terror to contribute towards the amelioration of certain hardships to German nationals which resulted from Hitler's aggressive policies.

"The draft of the Equalization of Burdens law, which is currently before the Parliament of the German Federal Republic, fails to exempt victims of Nazi persecution from the levy on all capital assets in Germany. If adopted in its present form, this measure would deprive the survivors of Nazi genocide of half of their assets which they may succeed in recovering in Germany. In this connection, the Conference also wishes to stress that the vast majority of persecutees would be excluded from any benefits envisaged under the proposed measure since they do not reside in Germany."

Woman Was

Mrs. Florence Naumberg Cane, sixty-nine, art director of the Clinic for Gifted Children at New York University and author and lecturer on art education, died at her home, 40 E. 57th Street, New York, after a long illness. Mrs. Cane was the author of "The Artist in Each of Us," published last year and used as a textbook in many schools for art teachers. The book contains theories she developed in a lifetime of teaching art to children and adults. She was the wife of Melville Cane, poet, lawyer and literary executor of the late Sinclair Lewis.

Born in New York City, Mrs. Cane attended Horace Mann School and later the Art Students League. She studied under such painters as William M. Chase, Robert Henri, Kenneth Hayes Miller and Abraham Rattner. A well known artist in her own right, she headed the art department of the Walden School for many years and was art adviser at the Dalton School. From 1934 through 1937 she operated her own art school in Rockefeller Center.

For the last thirteen years Mrs. Cane had been in charge of art instruction at the Clinic for Gifted Children where her pupils ranged in age from four to eighteen years. In her teaching she stressed personal expression, freedom of style and individuality rather than the formal teaching of technique.

Mrs. Cane lectured frequently on art and was the author of many articles in art and educational magazines. Her book was selected by "Parents Magazine" as one of the five most valuable for parents and teachers in 1951. Surviving besides her husband are two daughters, Mrs. Katherine Mareus and Mrs. Mary Robinson.

The sensible way of reducing excess weight, if it is not due to any disease, is to cut down on the richer foods such as sweets, pastries, cakes and creamy pies, without cutting out any of the necessary nutrients required for the maintenance of the body. Nuts and dried fruits make a good substitute for candies.

The growing revolt by Orthodox rabbis against low religious standards at Jewish weddings, bar-mitzvahs and funerals was again sparked by funeral practices in Rock Island, Ill. A full-fledged battle against non-Jewish funeral practices is being waged in that city by Rabbi Oscar Fleishaker. With all Jewish funerals under the supervision of the city's Chevra Kadisha, the religious committee assumes full responsibility for the funeral, including calling for the body, washing and dressing it, arranging the cost of the funeral with the family, calling for the proper religious functionaries and advising the family in future procedure. The cost of the funeral has been based on the casket used. Three types of caskets have been approved in ascending price levels, thinking that the [illegible] in Jewish cemeteries can be [illegible] by the public spending [illegible] on [illegible] funeral.

RESUME HAGUE

ation from at The Hague had recognized as the valid claim of Israel $715,000,000."

Dr. Nahum Goldmann said that he had received assurances from the German Government that a separate offer would be made to satisfy the claims of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany. This offer will formally be submitted when the negotiations are resumed. With regard to the form of payment, Dr Goldmann made a point of the fact that the agreement provides for the delivery, not only of goods of German manufacture, but also goods of foreign manufacture which Germany may obtain through barter agreements.

Dr. Goldmann pointed out that before the deadlock at The Hague, agreement had been obtained on a German legislative program affecting the claims of individual victims of Nazism for restitution and indemnification. "It is essential that this agreement now be approved by the German Cabinet and that the proposed legislation be presented to, and passed by, the Bundestag as soon as possible," he said. The main purpose of this legislation demanded by the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany was to protect the rights of a vast number of individuals, victims of Nazi persecution, whose claims have not yet been satisfied six years after the conclusion of the war.

The German Cabinet's offer provides that the claims be paid out within twelve years, Dr. Goldmann said. The Israel Government and the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany had hoped that this would be accomplished within a shorter period, he said. There is still "a very good chance, however," he added, "that the German Government, once she has re-established her commercial credit, which should be soon, may apply for a loan in order to meet these moral claims in less time." The negotiations, once concluded, "should result in substantial assistance to Israel's strained economy and to individual claimants, and will provide at least some compensation in the material sphere for the inestimable, manifold and horrendous damages inflicted upon Jewry."

succeeded as president by Mrs. Ezra W. Murphy. Mr. Stroock then became chairman of the board.

In his long career as a woolen manufacturer, Mr. Stroock was a strong supporter of an adequate protective tariff. During the first World War, he took a leave of absence to serve as a member of the Council of National Defense, in charge of felt production. Later he served a Chief of the Felt Division of the War Industries Board.

He was a member of Bernard Baruch's group of dollar-a-year men and was appointed to the Inspector General Staff of the Army, with the rank of colonel. In that capacity he served as Chief of the Textile Division of the United States Army Purchase, Storage and Traffic Division.

Mr. Stroock had served as a director of the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers. He was a member of the New York Grand Jury Association and the Panel Board of the American Arbitration Association. He was known for his philanthropic activities, not only with large philanthropic enterprises but also charitable activities to individuals.

A member of the Quaker Ridge Golf Club, he belonged also to the National Republican Club, and the Wool Bureau, Inc., and was a governor of the American Tariff League. His writings on rare specialty fibers included "From Rare Fibers to Fine Fabrics," "The Story of Camel Hair," "The Story of Vicuna," "Llamas and Llamaland," and "Insulative Value of Fibers."

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eleanor McClane Stroock; a son, Louis S. Stroock; his mother, Mrs. Pauline S. Stroock, and his brother, Bertram A. Stroock.

eager for intellectual and spiritual interchange in fullest possible measure with our brethren in Israel, but we can accept only those interpretations and forms of faith which are in harmony with our understanding of Judaism."

At another session, the delegates approved the report of the organization's committee on church and state, which denounced what it called "a virulent campaign against the public schools."

The report, prepared by a committee headed by Rabbi Jacob K. Shankman of New Rochelle, N. Y., criticized the "wild allegations of subversion by self-appointed vigilantes, mounting 'irresponsible' criticism of textbooks, the familiar and frightening techniques of witchhunting and book-burning, intimidation by super-patriots and pressure from the sincerely misguided and uninformed, suspicions and insinuations which would confine the freedom of the inquiring spirit to a straitjacket authoritarianism—all these, and genuine, earnest disagreement, are the signs of the crisis and conflict."

The report opposed the recommendation of the New York Board of Regents that every school day begin with a non-sectarian prayer. It said that the introduction of such a prayer might lead to further encroachments upon the principle of separation of church and state.

Z.O.A. HEAD

stress the "positive value" of Jewish education and the Hebrew language. He also held that the Zionist movement "should play an important role in the effort to safeguard the position of the Jewish community within the general community."

Abba S. Eban, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, asserted that his nation's stability "will be greatly enhanced by the continuing efforts of the Zionist movement to win world support for Israel's legitimate aims." He held that the Zionist movement "can have no more important task than to inculcate the knowledge and reverence of the Hebrew language and culture of which Israel is but the modern embodiment."

Mr. Eban added, "If this task is neglected any further, Israel and the Jewish people will become foreign to each other and this decisive partnership will be cut across by a gulf of spiritual alienation."

Mr. Eban declared that his nation's institutional and scientific life required "a far higher degree of personal participation in the actual life of the country by Jews who bring with them the experience and instincts of democracy and cultural creativeness."

Benjamin G. Browdy, retiring president of the Z. O. A., in his presidential report called upon the delegates to adopt "a policy of freedom of action for the organization without entangling alliances with any Zionist group, and of nonintervention on the part of our organization in the affairs of any party in Israel." Mr. Browdy asserted that Israel's welfare could be effectively supported by the Zionist movement "without ties, alliances or identification with any Zionist group in Israel." Dr. Emanuel Neumann, member of the Jewish Agency Executive and former president of the ZOA, and Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the Jewish Agency, discussed the World Zionist Organization and its future role in major addresses at the convention of the Zionist Organization of America. D. Neumann, who recently returned from Israel where he heads the Economic Department of the Jewish Agency, called upon the ZOA to proclaim among its primary aims increased private capital investment in Israel and promotion of immigration to Israel of American Jewish professional and technical workers. "We should overcome," he said, "any lurking inhibition or timidity about the idea of an American Aliyah (immigration to Israel) but proclaim it forthrightly as one of our essential aims and follow through on it. The Zionist Movement which fails to produce Alisah or Chalutziut (pioneering) ceases to be Zionist."

Dr. Nahum Goldmann proposed creation of two separate instruments to assist Israel: one, the Jewish Agency in which every organized group ready to help Israel economically and financially could participate, and the other, a strong Zionist movement devoted exclusively to Zionist tasks. Dr. Goldmann also proposed a Congress of American Zionists, representing 600,000 to 700,000 Zionists, "the strongest single force in American Jewish life" which would convene annually or once in two years.

Judge Louis E. Levinthal, of Philadelphia, who presided, calling for a "strong and [illegible] World Zionist Organization, warned against "partisan acrimony and personal bitterness" in determining the future course of the world organization, whose function, he said, needs to be seriously explored and radically changed.

In his address, Dr. Emanuel Neumann said that, at an estimated cost of $2,500 for resettling one immigrant, the state of Israel has spent approximately $1,750,000,000 on the 700,000 immigrants who have entered the country. This has been a basic cause of Israel's present economic crisis, he explained, because "all the sums made available from abroad have amounted to less than $750,000,000 leaving a capital deficit of more than a billion dollars for the period; and this huge deficit could not possibly be covered by the available internal resources of the state." He stated that "a lowered standard of living and other hardships are in large part the consequences of this deficit".

Another factor seriously affecting Israel's economy, according to Dr. Neumann, is the lag of agricultural and industrial output behind population growth. "So far as the imbalance between the influx of immigrants and the influx of capital is concerned, the conviction is growing in Israel that it can only be corrected by a vastly accelerated pace of private capital investment to supplement the flow of funds from public sources such as the United Jewish Appeal, the Israel Independence Loan and the U.S. Grant-in-Aid. All of these are vitally important and it is difficult to imagine how Israel could have managed without these forms of support. But the combined income from these sources does not suffice; private capital for permanent investment is indispensable, Dr. Neumann said.

In his address, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, calling for unanimity among Zionists and the convening of a Congress of American Zionists, declared: "A half dozen conventions of Jewish groups could not match the effect and effectiveness of this one great platform, this solemn manifestation of combined Zionist strength. It should be one of the major tasks of American Zionist life in the immediate future to develop such structure, by forging the American Zionist Council to such instrument or in some other ways. Such organizational structure would inevitably eclipse the parties, push them into the background, and prevent issues arising from Israel's internal affairs from becoming decisive issues, artificial as that may be, in Zionist life in the Diaspora (Jewish community outside of Israel)." "This has regrettably happened in the last few years, to the detriment of the whole Zionist Movement", he added.

The international Zionist leader defined the relationship between Israel and the Zionist Movement as follows: "There must be a genuine and full partnership between the Zionist Movement and the State of Israel in building the State and in mobilizing the Jewish people behind this effort. No Zionist Movement can work in opposition to the State and hope to survive. We will try to influence the leaders of the State, but on all matters concerning Israel, it is their decision that must be final.

"On the other hand, it is necessary that the State cooperate with the Zionist Movement, fully and in a spirit of unqualified good will. All it undertakes, in organized form, in Jewish life outside Israel, must be done in consultation coordination with the Zionist Movement. On internal Jewish matters, the State must entrust to the Zionist Movement the task of ironing out and reconciling conflicts and coordinating assistance to Israel".

However, Dr. Goldmann told the Convention delegates that Zionism cannot orient itself exclusively towards Israel, if it wishes to become the guiding force in Jewish life. He considered a "strong Zionist Movement, linking Jews with Israel, linking their personal and organizational life with Israel, no less important an instrument than the State itself. Jews must feel that we provide leadership in all spheres of Jewish life, always on the basis of the indissoluble relationship between the Diaspora and Israel".

As to two separate instruments to aid Israel, Dr. Goldmann said: "The financial and economic assistance would thus be the joint responsibility of Zionist and non-Zionists, while the Zionists would be provided with an uninhibited opportunity for the development of their ideology and the implementation of a full Zionist program through their separate instrumentality. Such development would also permit Zionists to deal more effectively with the problems of Jewish life outside of Israel".

You'll prefer NESCAFE 3 good reasons why

1 it's the best coffee you will ever taste

There's a full richness of flavour in every cup of NESCAFE. That's why more people, the world over, drink NESCAFE than all other instant coffees combined.

2 it saves you so much money

It's a premium coffee, always fresh and full of flavour. Yet NESCAFE will save you up to 40c a pound over regular coffee.

3 it's easy to prepare

Quick as the kettle boils, you can have satisfying, invigorating coffee. Make it in the cup or coffee-server. Just use one teaspoonful of NESCAFE for each cup desired, add boiling hot water and your coffee is ready.
